

Changing the World: What Works? October 1, 2009

Posted by

Thursday, 01 October 2009 10:16 - Last Updated Thursday, 01 October 2009 10:16

Changing the World: What Works? October 1, 2009

PEJ News - wcarroll - The University of Victoria is launching a new interdisciplinary undergraduate program in Social Justice Studies, which will connect the dots between the troubles and issues of our time, with the aim of both intellectual clarification and social action. The program will be launched on October 1, 2009, with an Inaugural Lecture by Mary-Wynne Ashford, Ph.D., M.D.

<http://web.uvic.ca/socialjustice> Changing the World: What Works?

We seldom hear of the successes of ordinary people working for social justice and human rights, but lessons we can learn from a woman in an African village, or a math professor in Bogot